If My Horse Were A Movie Star...

If my horse were a movie star how would they know?

They would know because I would know and then he would be a secret for a while but then finally I would tell everybody but first I would tell the news people and then they, could put it on the news and everybody would know. He would still be at the place were he usually stays then he would move to HollyWood and that would be super duper exiting. Every morning would be the same until he moved and I bet he would be exited himself if he was going to move to HollyWood.

If my horse were a movie star he would be a super hero because he is a super horse. He would go to Kung-Fu lessons then he would go to set and have a massage because he's tiered. Then it's off to Hair and Makeup but the makeup won't take long because he's already so fancy, but the hair will take a little while because his hair is really short. Then he'd have to practice his lines but that take a little while because he might mix his lines up. Then after it is time to go to set and save peoples lives. On set he would start out as an ordinary horse then something magical happened he was turned into a SUPER HERO!! He would automatically change into his super hero form when someone was in danger. On set he saved so many peoples lives from danger but then, he'd mix one of his lines up and they would have to start all over again. After a few more hours it would be time to go home and rest. When he got home he would get super which would be fancy grain flown in from Europe prepared by his personal chef which would probably be me. He would sleep in a nice cozy heated barn and in he morning I would have to clean his room and feed him more grain. Then finally after his movie was a blockbuster we would go on the red carpet, but it wouldn't be so much of red carpet it would be more likely a carpet full of clean shavings. But even if my horse is not a super hero that saves people from danger of is a movie star that goes to HollyWood I still love him the way he is.
